Please take notice that the Securities Administrator of the State of Washington has reason to believe that Respondents [REDACTED] have each violated the Securities Act of Washington. Nature of the Offering 3.

4. From approximately November 7, 2017 to December 7, 2017, [REDACTED] conducted a “crowdsale” that was, in effect, open to the general public. During the crowdsale, [REDACTED] sold $32 million worth of [REDACTED] Tokens. During this offering, investors purchased their [REDACTED] Tokens with Ether. [REDACTED] did not restrict this offering to accredited investors. Instead, [REDACTED] attempted to restrict the crowdsale to residents of certain areas. Before the crowdsale, [REDACTED] intended to use the crowdsale’s proceeds to complete its platform which it called [REDACTED] during the period prior to the crowdsale. Since the conclusion of the crowdsale, [REDACTED] has not issued any additional [REDACTED] Tokens to the public, forcing prospective purchasers to buy [REDACTED] Tokens through cryptocurrency exchanges.

[REDACTED] and [REDACTED] Token Purchasers Viewed and Treated the [REDACTED] Tokens as Investments

5. [REDACTED] promoted [REDACTED] Tokens as if they were investments prior to the crowdsale. For example, in the months preceding the crowdsale, [REDACTED] publicized on its website at the time, [REDACTED] the [REDACTED] Token’s prospects as an investment rather than its value as a utility coin to be used on [REDACTED]. For example, in [REDACTED] 2017, [REDACTED] boasted about its appearances on several websites that cover the cryptocurrency community, including Coin Agenda, Coin Telegraph, and Cryptotraders.¹ Moreover, in [REDACTED] 2017, the [REDACTED] blog, [REDACTED], featured an item about a newly-formed partnership with [REDACTED] [REDACTED] [REDACTED] [REDACTED]²

6. Before and during the crowdsale, prospective purchasers were interested in the [REDACTED] Token's value as an investment, not as a utility coin. For example, in [REDACTED] 2017, a prospective purchaser stated in an email to [REDACTED] that he was not a cryptocurrency trader, but he wished to purchase and tuck away [REDACTED] Tokens for his children's future. In [REDACTED] 2017, prospective purchasers sent emails to [REDACTED] asking how they could track the [REDACTED] Token's value. Other prospective purchasers asked when the [REDACTED] Tokens would be listed on crypto exchanges. [REDACTED] told at least one prospective purchaser that [REDACTED] Tokens would be transferable after the crowdsale.

7. [REDACTED] continued to promote the [REDACTED] Token's value as an investment on its blog after the crowdsale. In [REDACTED] 2018, [REDACTED] promoted the [REDACTED] Token's listing on [REDACTED], a South Korean cryptocurrency exchange [REDACTED]. In [REDACTED] 2018, [REDACTED] included its listing on cryptocurrency exchanges Binance and Upbit. In [REDACTED] 2018, [REDACTED] promoted the [REDACTED] Token's inclusion on [REDACTED], a [REDACTED] d cryptocurrency exchange.

8. [REDACTED] also intended to rely on the [REDACTED] Token's value as an investment by dedicating a comparatively small amount of its reserve of [REDACTED] Tokens to compensate the app's users for [REDACTED] [REDACTED], and by paying its debts with [REDACTED] Tokens. Prior to the crowdsale, [REDACTED] had issued 7.5 billion

1 [REDACTED] Tokens. Of this amount, [REDACTED] made five billion [REDACTED] Tokens available to the public during the
 2 crowdsale. [REDACTED] set aside less than fifteen percent of the 7.5 billion [REDACTED] Tokens for use as utility coins.
 3 [REDACTED] also planned to pay marketing and promotion expenses with this amount. Furthermore, approximately 4 18.3% of the [REDACTED] Tokens were set aside for payment to employees, contractors, and to [REDACTED] partners,
 5 among others.

6 [REDACTED] Did Not Provide Investors with a Disclosure Document

7 9. [REDACTED] did not provide its crowdsale investors with a disclosure document containing all of 8 the material facts of the token investment. Consequently, [REDACTED] did not disclose in writing to the crowdsale
 9 investors the risks related to investing in [REDACTED] Tokens.³ Such risks include, but are not limited to, the risk
 10 that [REDACTED] Tokens may not increase in value, the risk that cryptocurrency exchanges may not list [REDACTED]
 11 Tokens and thus affect the liquidity of the tokens, the risk that exchanges that currently list [REDACTED] Tokens
 12 may de-list them, and the risk that [REDACTED] Tokens may become significantly regulated.

13 Registration Status

14 10. [REDACTED] is not registered to sell its securities in the State of Washington, and has not 15 previously been so registered.

16 11. [REDACTED] is not registered to sell its 17 securities in the State of Washington, and has not previously been so registered.
